

Rolex Datejust 31—Light and Shade

► THE DATEJUST, WHICH represents Rolex's definition of classic elegance, has consistently reinvented itself since its creation in 1945. Being the first self-winding waterproof chronometer wristwatch featuring a date window, it marked a significant milestone in watchmaking history. Now in its latest edition, the Datejust 31, in 18k yellow gold, comes with the brand's first-ever red ombré—the gradual blending of one colour into another—dial adorned with 10 diamond hour markers and a diamond-set bezel. While previous ombré dials featured more subtle colours such as blue and green, the red dial makes this watch a collector's delight.

Cartier—Panthère de Cartier

► IN ITS LATEST avatar, the iconic Panthère de Cartier has undergone a spectacular jewelled transformation. Not wanting to choose between the zebra and the tiger, the watch has both the motifs. Black lacquer represents the zebra and orange and yellow spessartites reflect the tiger. The dial is adorned with 145 brilliant-cut diamonds while the bracelet is further paved with 314 diamonds. Launched originally in the 1980s, the Panthère's fluid bracelet made it an instant classic. The latest jewelled version has Cartier playing to its strengths as a leading jewellery maison.
