

BEAUTY & PERSONAL CARE

MIXED DOUBLES

The Good Glamm Group is looking to corner a chunk of the US market through its deal with tennis legend Serena Williams

BY KRISHNA GOPALAN

► INDIAN PERSONAL CARE start-up The Good Glamm Group appears to have pulled off a coup, by entering a joint venture with tennis great Serena Williams. The new entity, called Wyn Beauty, aims to capitalise on the growth in the US beauty market.

Though the terms of the arrangement have not been disclosed, it marks a shift from the traditional brand ambassador approach since Williams has put in money to be an equity partner. This could ensure a higher and more meaningful commitment. Williams, 42, is a winner of a record 23 Grand Slam singles majors and is acknowl-

BRAND BUILDING

Tennis legend Serena Williams (right) is an equity partner in the entity called Wyn Beauty, a JV with The Good Glamm Group, which is headed by Darpan Sanghvi edged as not just among the best but a very influential name in the world of tennis.

For The Good Glamm Group, this will not just give it a growth opportunity, but will also provide it with a leg-up before its public issue, which is expected by Diwali 2025. It became a unicorn earlier this year, valued at $1.2 billion in its latest funding round, and counts Prosus Ventures, Warburg Pincus, Alteria Capital, Bessemer Venture Partners, and Stride