

Ventures among its backers.

Darpan Sanghvi, Founder of The Good Glamm Group, says the agreement with Williams will mark his entity's entry into the US market. "After all, it is the world's biggest market for beauty. If we get it right, it will help propel growth in the rest of the world," he tells BT. He says this is the first time that an Indian company has done a mainstream consumer launch in the US to create a global brand. "It is a watershed moment in India's start-up ecosystem."

Wyn Beauty will be launched through a partnership with Ulta Beauty, the US's largest beauty retailer, across 685 offline stores. That will cover around half its footprint across the country. An optimistic Sanghvi now expects 25-35% of the group's revenues to come from its international business. "This strategic focus is critical as we prepare to go public next October. With a diverse portfolio of brands across diverse geographies, we are well-positioned to capture market opportunities," he says.

DARPAN SANGHVI, FOUNDER OF THE GOOD GLAMM GROUP, EXPECTS 25-35% OF THE REVENUES TO COME FROM ITS INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

According to him, there is a key difference between India and the US. "The domestic market will see robust growth, and the US offers better margins. By leveraging a global portfolio, our total addressable market is now quite literally unlimited." In terms of pricing, Wyn

Beauty will offer products for the lips, face, and eyes in the $20 to $30 price range.

In a media statement, Williams said, "To me, beauty has always been about self-expression and stepping into the best version of myself. Throughout my career, I was always searching for make-up that looked good after hours on the court, mixing products myself and creating my own formulas while travelling the world." The intention behind Wyn Beauty, she maintained, was for people to live in it every single day of their lives and enhance the beauty they already have. "Beauty is a field where everyone wins. You set and define your own personal goals and standards."

Sanghvi will definitely hope that this double team will deliver in the US market.

@krishnagopalan

Professional Certificate in Hospital Management

Stay at the forefront by enhancing your knowledge and skills.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

- Well-crafted 12 month online program
- Tailor-made to cater to healthcare professionals
- Industry relevant curriculum from the world class faculty of IIM Bangalore
- Topics include Operations management, Strategy, Human resource management, Finance and more

CONTACT US

<https://iimbx.iimb.ac.in/hospital-management/>

Registration starts:
15th April 2024

Program starts:
1st July 2024

Scan to know more