urgent need to unlock climate financing—particularly from multilateral institutions—to accelerate sustainable development in emerging economies like India. CareEdge ESG Ratings, the knowledge partner, shortlisted companies based on publicly available data, assessing top 1,000 listed entities across 11 sectors with significant environmental and social impact. The final winners were selected by a jury chaired by Rajnish Kumar, former Chairman of the State Bank of India. Experts said multilateral institutions such as the World Bank and regional development banks are sitting on sizeable pools of concessional capital—low-cost, long-term financing earmarked for development goals. However, these institutions are reluctant to disburse funds without robust regulatory frameworks.
