

“INDIA NEEDS TO BACK ITS INNOVATORS WITH CAPITAL”

Adar Poonawalla, CEO, Serum Institute of India, on life after Covid, vaccine pricing, and expansion into new frontiers

BY SIDDHARTH ZARABI

PERHAPS NO PERSON symbolised the fight against Covid-19 quite like Adar Poonawalla, the 44-year-old Chief Executive Officer of the world's biggest vaccine maker by volume, Serum Institute of India. The massive vaccine roll-out in India, through which well over a billion people were inoculated against the deadly virus, boosted Serum's revenue and profits. But they have dipped since then. In a conversation with Siddharth Zarabi, Group Editor of Business Today, Poonawalla talks about the path ahead for Serum, his decision to invest in a film production house, and more. Edited excerpts:

Let's start with the big picture. Serum Institute played a crucial role in the Covid fight.
