

BEYOND JUST A BEAUTY BRAND A Journey of Beauty with Actionism

19 Years of Impact, E - Tricycles to Empower Waste Collectors, India's Eco Warriors.

Executive Chairperson, Quest Retail

In 1976, when Dame Anita Roddick opened a small store in Brighton, she didn't set out to build just another beauty brand—she set out to challenge everything the beauty industry stood for. She campaigned animal testing, demanded fair trade, fought for environment protection, advocated self-esteem and put purpose and story at the heart of every product.

That store became The Body Shop, and in the last almost 5 decades, has inspired millions by proving that business can be both successful and deeply impactful. Almost fifty years later, that same spirit continues to define The Body Shop across the globe.

The Body Shop in India, has taken root in a way that is both powerful and authentic. In 2006, The Body Shop opened its first store in the country. What began as a retail footprint nearly 20 years ago, has grown into an impactful presence of 200 stores and deeply integrated in the lives of Indian consumers - built on trust, impact & actionism

Guided by Shriti Malhotra, Executive Chairperson, Quest Retail (the leading, beauty-focused, specialty retailer), The Body Shop India is committed to its core belief that business should be a force for good. This principle shapes not just the products it offers, but the business values it upholds.

'Retail Focused, Community Obsessed', The Body Shop channels this philosophy into every aspect of business. The Body Shop, pioneered with Community Fair Trade in Beauty and has also been working on multiple Community Fair Trade programs (CFT) including Manorama Industries in Chhattisgarh.

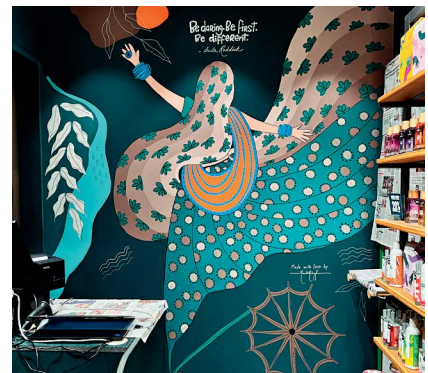

The Body Shop's journey in India is rooted in purpose-led activism. Since 2019, our partnership with Plastics For Change has supported 2,000 waste collectors with fair prices, better working conditions, and access to education and finance—through India's first Community Fair Trade in plastics. To date, we've sourced over 2,000 metric tonnes of plastic waste—equal to 100 million bottles—reshaping recycling practices.

Now, as The Body Shop celebrates 19 years in India, they mark the milestone with the donation of 19 E-Tricycles through our 2024 'Spark A Change' program, uplifting livelihoods of waste collectors.

This spirit of actionism has always led The Body Shop in India. The Body Shop India launched the 'Youth Collective Council' to amplify young voices and co-create a more sustainable, inclusive future—introducing accessible in-store experiences like Braille signage. The brand also continues to scale its Return, Recycle, Repeat (RRR) program, driving circularity in beauty.

And everywhere it goes, The Body Shop makes space for stories—often literally. It's a new generation of Activist Workshop stores that double up as canvases, showcasing murals that celebrate the local cultures and communities they serve.

One of the 50 large-scale community projects, includes the recent youth centric Why25 program that worked with Young India foundation to add 25 million first time young voters to the 2024 electoral rolls. It also collected 1.5 million petition signatures advocating for lowering the candidacy age in Parliament. India.

In the past, the brand has campaigned to: Stop Sex Trafficking of Children & Young People, which generated over 7 lakh signatures in India. This was followed by the globally aligned Forever Against Animal Testing (FAAT) program in the year 2017, which garnered 8+ million signatures worldwide and culminated in a petition to the United Nations calling for a global ban on cosmetic animal testing.

As the Body Shop completes 19 years and embarks upon its 12 month long 20th Anniversary in India, it carries with it not just the legacy of a beauty brand and the trust of its customers, but the power of a movement. A movement that proves that when beauty meets purpose, change becomes inevitable.
