Honoring the Legacy of Lokmata Devi Ahilyabai Holkar: A Vision of Empowerment, Service, and Nation-Building

Marking the 300th birth anniversary of the iconic queen and reformer Lokmata Devi Ahilyabai Holkar, Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi paid a powerful tribute to her extraordinary legacy at the Lokmata Devi Ahilyabai Mahila Sashaktikaran Mahasammelan held at the Jamboree Ground in Bhopal.

Calling her a symbol of women's power in nation-building, the Prime Minister remembered her guiding words: "Whatever we have received is a debt given by the people – and we must repay it." He emphasized that these ideals are central to the government's approach, which sees "Citizen as Divine" as the soul of governance.

"Devi Ahilyabai's vision that governance must serve and uplift people remains more relevant than ever," said the Prime Minister. "Today, India walks in her footsteps, working to empower every citizen, especially our mothers, sisters, and daughters."

Following the Prime Minister's address, Chief Minister Dr. Mohan Yadav welcomed him to the land of Devi Ahilyabai, calling it a day of historic pride for Madhya Pradesh.

"This is a unique moment when the leader of the world's largest democracy pays tribute to one of India's greatest women reformers on her sacred land," said Dr. Yadav. He recalled Ahilyabai's exceptional governance, her separation of personal and state resources, and her relentless service to the people, which continues to inspire modern administrators.

The Chief Minister highlighted a lineage of powerful women leaders from Madhya Pradesh—Rani Durgavati, Rani Avantibai, Rajmata Scindia—who upheld the values of self-respect and service. "Prime Minister Modi has brought immense prestige to our state by appointing Indore's Sumitra Tai as Speaker of the Lok Sabha and ensuring that today, even our President is a woman."

He credited the Central Government's vision for helping Madhya Pradesh align its development
