

with just the existing audience. That increases the need to attract new users and eliminate entry barriers. To address that, the network introduced multi-cam feeds, an exclusive Hangout feed, and a first-of-its-kind family and kids broadcast called 'Motu Patlu present Super Funday.' These separate types of feeds cater to different audience segments. Motu and Patlu are two animated characters commentating for kids and "is custom made for those in the 8-12 age segment," says Gupta. All this comes on the back of consumer learning and insights acquired over the years. Similarly, the Hangout feed on Friday night for Gen Z presents a much lighter take on the match.

When the IPL rights (for both television and broadcast) were clinched by Star India, which was later acquired by Disney before getting merged with Reliance Industries' Viacom18, for the 2018-22 period (at that point, the outgo was ₹16,348 crore and renewed for 2023-27 at ₹48,390 crore), research found that IPL was not being considered serious cricket
