"The Bangalore Bombers",
July 23, 2007

"It is really horrifying when young, educated Muslims take to jihad. Parents should take the onus and teach their children the definition of Islam."

Tales of Terror

It is sad that Bangalore is hogging the limelight for wrong reasons ("The Bangalore Bombers", July 23). First, the shootout at IISc and now the Glasgow plot, they are sowing seeds of terrorism in the city.

UNNIKRISHNAN NAIR, on e-mail

Manmohan Singh's view that "terrorists do not belong to any community or religion" impels us to ask one crucial question. Why do all terrorists swear by Islam while committing crime?

ASOKE C. BANERJEE
Kolkata

When the prime minister said that Pakistan is a victim of terrorism like India, many self-appointed analysts and critics said he was trying to appease people beyond the border. What he said was true, although there is a difference. While India is bearing the brunt of foreign terrorism, Pakistan is suffering at the hands of its own fanatics.

JASPREET S. OBEROI, Patiala

With India becoming both a target and a recruitment base for organisations like Al-Qaeda, it is obvious that the West will now look at us with suspicion. After these kinds of incidents, none can blame airport authorities in the US and the UK for being overtly careful of Asian passengers.

SUSHANT KUMAR, Delhi

Failed terror plot in the UK unmasks the fact that modern-day radicalism has not left even the educated classes untouched. Youngsters should realise that killing for extremist causes breeds more hatred in this world and terrorist activities can jeopardise their lives and careers forever.

Arty Facts

The proposed Kolkata Museum of Modern Art will fulfil the need for a world-class Indian centre of art ("A New Canvas", July 23). A budget of Rs 500 crore is manageable if corporate houses come forward to sponsor the project. The museum will become a meeting ground for artists all over the world.

Provoked

There must have been enough provocation for Puja Chauhan, the harassed housewife of Rajkot, to march through the city streets—in her undergarments—to protest against the barbarities of her in-laws ("Naked News" July 23). Instead of focussing solely on her act, the police should take necessary steps and investigate Chauhan's allegations.

Quota Gameplan

India should get rid of reservation in educational institutes and government jobs ("Dividing to Rule", July 23). A game played by politicians to get votes, it will damage the social fabric for good.

Mush Right

General Pervez Musharraf's use of military force to flush out militants from Lal Masjid should be appreciated ("Drawing a Bloodline", July 23). Although the General is facing flak from certain critics, the fact remains that be it a madrasa or any other place of worship, it can't be allowed to become a safe haven for militants.

K. PRADEEP, Chennai

The Lal Masjid clash is a premonition of what is to come. The radicals in Pakistan will join hands
