unusual, showed that he had not anticipated it. Nor did he expect that he would be taken immediately into custody. When judgement day came, none in the Dutt family was prepared to cope with the final outcome. Dutt's two sisters, Namrata and Priya, with their respective husbands Kumar Gaurav and Owen Roncon, were waiting at the ITC Grand Central Hotel, close to the Arthur Road Jail, for the verdict. They waited till the judge heard Dutt's plea to be given time to surrender. When the judge refused to grant him that, the family came to meet Dutt at the jail, where Priya told him to be strong. Later in the evening, Priya's secretary officially sent out her comment: "The family is truly disturbed at the outcome of today's proceedings, but although disappointed, we accept it with a saddened heart. Sanjay has accepted the verdict, and has surrendered himself to the court. We will explore our legal options at this point, and proceed accordingly."

While the family was mourning at its Bandra residence, Dutt entered his cell in barrack No. 1, armed with 10 packets of Marlboro Lights, his favourite Molton Brown soap, hair and mouth wash, while towels and toothbrush were picked up by his sisters from the hotel they were staying at. Dutt also wanted to carry a set of clothing into his cell, but was not allowed to do so, as the jail provides uniform to all convicts. While he is in prison, Dutt will lead a rather regimented life with tea at 7 a.m., lunch at 11, and dinner at 5 p.m. Between 12 noon and 3 p.m. he will be allowed to move around the barrack, but thereafter he will have to retire to his cell. The only form of entertainment will be newspapers.

Dutt's chances of appeal can come under pressure if prosecution and CBI decide to press TADA charges on him in the Supreme Court. Says Nikam: "Once we have a copy of the judgement, we will decide whether the order of discharge under TADA is to be challenged." Whatever the legal outcome, no Bollywood script could have produced such dramatic twists and turns. The 16 months he has already spent in Arthur Road Jail, where he is lodged once again, are symbolic in more ways than one. For Dutt, the wheel of bad fortune has come full circle.
