

REBEL WITH A CAUSE: Ramadoss's protests embarrass Karunanidhi

party took up other inter-state water disputes to woo the farmers. PMK also reached out to the Nadar community in south Tamil Nadu by agitating against the entry of Reliance Industries into retail trade, which is dominated by the Nadars in the state.

Thrilled at the war of words between the two partners, Karunanidhi's arch foe Jayalithaa even invited Ramadoss to join the AIADMK-led alliance. But the PMK chief is in no mood to switch over now. "Our support to the DMK Government will continue for the next four years. But the relationship should not be a one-way traffic," Ramadoss told INDIA TODAY.

In the PMK's election manifesto released before the Assembly polls, Ramadoss had promised to serve as a 'shadow cabinet' even if his coalition partner DMK won the elections. He has lived up to that promise. The once small political outfit now owns its own TV channel and a multi-edition newspaper. That's more than enough ammunition to keep any government—run by friend or foe—on its toes. ■
