

“Fragrances account for almost half the market, growing at 1.7 times the overall market,” says Jana.

The fragrance market in India is largely untapped and has vast room for growth. “The Indian luxury consumer is no longer just buying a fragrance—they’re seeking a story, a signature sense of brand ethos that goes beyond the purchase. Luxury today is deeply personal—and that’s a powerful shift,” adds Birla.

HE SURGE EXTENDS to high-end dermal and wellness treatments. Dr. Kiran Sethi, a dermatologist, author of Skin Sense and director of Isya Aesthetics, says some of the most sought-after procedures, especially among celebrities and high-net-worth individuals, include PDRN, which makes skin healthier and glowing at around ₹19,000. NAD injections and IV NAD, priced at about ₹39,000, are hugely popular for boosting energy, supporting mitochondria, and helping with perimenopause. “At the higher end, the Regenerate Facial costs around ₹49,500, while Ulthera, a once-a-year face-tightening treatment, is priced about ₹2.5 lakh plus taxes.”

PDRN is short for Polydeoxribonucleotide, a naturally derived compound from salmon DNA that purportedly promotes skin regeneration. NAD stands for Nicotinamide Adenine Dinucleotide, a crucial enzyme in cellular metabolism. Perimenopause is the transition period towards menopause.

According to the latest ISAPS Global Survey, India ranks among the top 10 countries globally for aesthetic/cosmetic procedures, led by the US, Brazil, and Japan. ISAPS is short for International Society of Aesthetic Plastic Surgery.
