

VACHERON CONSTANTIN OVERSEAS AUTOMATIC 4520V

► If there is a modern heir to the spirit of adventure, it is Vacheron's Overseas. The 4520V in stainless steel features a Maltese-cross-inspired bezel, a finely finished calibre 5100, and most crucially, an interchangeable strap system. Within seconds, you can move from steel bracelet to rubber to leather, which means this watch is always in the right place. Few manufacturers have managed to pair Geneva Seal finishing with such an overtly practical ethos.

PATEK PHILIPPE AQUANAUT 5167A

► When Patek launched the Aquanaut in 1997, purists baulked at its youth-driven, sportier spirit. Today, the 5167A is considered one of the most versatile references in Geneva's catalogue. Its 40 mm steel case, tropical rubber strap, and slim 8.1 mm profile make it equally comfortable poolside or in a boardroom. The embossed dial provides texture, and inside ticks the 26-330 S C calibre, finished to Patek's exacting standards. BT
