

IN REAL ESTATE, what comes after luxury? Developers, investors, and affluent homebuyers, as if answering this very question, are shaping a new category in India—Branded Residences. Here, hotel operators lend their names, management, and design ethos to high-end apartments. These are now popping up across India's wealthiest cities and leisure destinations.

The 'Landscape of Branded Residences Report 2024' by hospitality focused research and advisory firm NOESIS Capital Advisors defines the segment as mixed-use developments where residential apartments are sold alongside a hotel with both jointly branded and managed. These residences are designed with hotel-like service standards, while still retaining layouts expected in a home—kitchens, multiple bathrooms, and living spaces adapted to Indian preferences. The promise? A blend of exclusivity and prestige, attributes that resonate with India's expanding class of high-net-worth individuals (HNIs).
