

ITC Hotels, Taj, and Radisson Hotel Group are all pursuing tie-ups. Each brings global experience in mixed-use developments, but strategies differ.

The Tata-owned Indian Hotels Company Limited (IHCL) is developing a mixed-use complex in Chennai. Spread across 3.5 acres, it will house a 235-room Taj hotel and 123 branded residences.

Four Seasons debuted in Bengaluru with Embassy One, a 109-unit project that became ready in 2020. It's new project in Mumbai—Four Seasons Private Residences Mumbai—in collaboration with Indian real estate firm Provenance Land, has 41 residences, including full-floor three-bedroom homes and five-to-six-bedroom duplexes. Located in the heart of the upscale Worli district, the 64-storey tower is already 80% sold. As per real estate retail site Magic Bricks, the price of flats ranges between ₹23.81 crore and ₹55.74 crore.

I TC HOTELS IS weighing whether its boutique label Storii could anchor villa projects, while also considering opportunities in its Welcomhotel brand. Marriott International, too, is exploring branded residences—from St. Regis and Ritz-Carlton to Westin and Sheraton.

The first of this is Westin Residences Gurugram, developed by Whiteland Corporation. Slated for completion in 2031, it is expected to be the largest Westin-branded residential project in the world. Units start at ₹6.5 crore and pre-sales have been brisk. Penny Trinh, Vice President, Mixed-Use Development, Marriott International, Asia Pacific (Excluding China), described Westin Residences Gurugram as a model project: designed around Westin's "Six Pillars of Well-being," with sustainable architecture and 24/7 hospitality services. "As a valuable brand extension across all luxury and

"Branded residences open opportunities for Marriott to generate meaningful unit growth"

PENNY TRINH
MARRIOTT
INTERNATIONAL

"As India's luxury market matures, we believe branded residences will become a key driver of differentiation" premium brands, branded residences open opportunities for Marriott to generate meaningful unit growth," says Trinh.

DILLIP RAJAKARIER
MINOR INTERNATIONAL

In India, Marriott has even assembled a team focused solely on expanding its branded residences portfolio. Target markets include the NCR, Mumbai, Bengaluru, Hyderabad, and Chennai, along with leisure hubs such as Goa and Udaipur.

Radisson Hotel Group is positioning itself in leisure and secondary markets, considering projects in Jaipur, Goa, and Tier I cities. With experience in branded residences in Istanbul and Dubai, the group intends to replicate similar models through Radisson Blu and Radisson Collection.

Minor Hotels, owner of the Avani and Anantara chains, has also joined the fray. Its first project in Visakhapatnam, the Avani+ Sunray Beach Visakhapatnam Resort, will combine 117 hotel rooms with 58 branded villas, slated for completion by 2028.

"Our approach to branded residences is to seamlessly integrate hospitality and residential offerings, providing elevated living experiences backed by the strength of our global brands.

As India's luxury market matures, we believe branded residences will become a key driver of value and differentiation," says Dillip