

From First-Generation Dreamer to Real Estate Game-Changer

Shri. M.V. Manikandan

Founder & Managing Director, Adissia Developers Pvt Ltd

In an industry often dominated by generational wealth and established networks, M.V. Manikandan stands as a testament to what vision and relentless execution can achieve. At just 30, the founder and managing director of Adissia Developers has already carved out a formidable presence in Tamil Nadu's competitive real estate sector, with ambitious plans that extend far beyond state boundaries.

"If you stay focused on your goal, work relentlessly, and respect your profession, success will eventually walk beside you," says Manikandan, articulating the philosophy that has guided his remarkable journey since 2012. Starting without the comfort of family backing or inherited business connections, he has methodically built five successful ventures across different industries, each addressing real problems with practicality, while creating opportunities for others.

Adissia Developers, launched in 2024, represents Manikandan's most ambitious bet yet. In just two years, the company has established itself as one of Tamil Nadu's fastest-growing real estate brands, delivering over 1 million square feet and maintaining a robust pipeline of 10 million square feet. The numbers tell only part of the story—what sets Adissia apart is its commitment to what Manikandan calls "transparent, customer-centric real estate solutions."

"You're the sculptor of your life. Make the sculpture in such a way that when people look back, all they can say is 'wow,'" Manikandan reflects, a sentiment that permeates Adissia's approach to development. The company's benchmark-setting project, One World in Kalapatti, exemplifies this philosophy with 271 premium villa plots across 14 acres, featuring 34% open space and over 35 lifestyle amenities—establishing new standards for plotted developments in the region.

What distinguishes Manikandan from many of his peers is his institutional thinking. "It's not simply about scaling a company, it's about building an institution that outlasts individuals, inspiring generations to come," he explains, outlining his vision to take Adissia public within 7-10 years.

The company's expansion strategy

A first-generation entrepreneur with no family legacy to lean on, M.V. Manikandan has built five successful ventures by age 30—and his latest, Adissia Developers, aims to go public within a decade.

is equally bold. Beyond Tamil Nadu, Adissia has set its sights on Maharashtra, Karnataka, and Telangana, with established offices in Chennai and Dubai complementing its Coimbatore headquarters. This geographic diversification reflects Manikandan's understanding that sustainable growth requires market diversification and risk mitigation.

Industry observers note Adissia's focus on affordable luxury and sustainable development as particularly well-timed, given India's rapidly evolving urban demographics and growing aspirations for quality living spaces. The company's emphasis on clear titles, secure communities, and technology-driven transactions addresses long-standing pain points in the sector.

"For Manikandan, business has never been about numbers alone—it has always been about people, impact, and creating platforms where others can grow," notes a company statement, highlighting the human-centric approach that has become Adissia's calling card.

As India's real estate sector experiences robust growth driven by urbanization and rising incomes, entrepreneurs like Manikandan—combining traditional values with modern execution—are well-positioned to capture emerging opportunities. His story proves that in today's India, success doesn't wait for age, background, or privilege—just vision, discipline, and the resilience to turn the impossible into inevitable.
