THE CUP OF JOY

Used in Jewish rituals, Kiddush cups—goblets used to hold wine or grape juice—have long been cherished heirlooms, symbolising continuity of faith and tradition. And now the oldest of them all is up for auction. Recent research dates the cup to the 11th or 12th century and traces it to Khorasan along the Silk Route.

‘The Cup of Joy’ is an extraordinary piece of history as examples of medieval Judaica are extremely rare, and—of the less than two dozen pieces that are known—this cup is the earliest.
