

SILVER SHINES

SILVER HAS BEEN on a glittering run in 2025, and analysts believe the rally is far from over. Macro tailwinds, coupled with a tight physical market—where rising industrial demand meets constrained supply—have been supporting the price of the white metal. As a result, silver has soared more than 44%, climbing to nearly ₹1.24 lakh per kg on September 8, 2025, from ₹85,851 per kg on December 31, 2024. Brokerage SAMCO Securities expects silver to touch ₹1.5 lakh a kg in the near term, while Motilal Oswal Financial Services and SS WealthStreet see it hitting ₹1.35 lakh per kg by Diwali.

VALUE OF INDIA'S PETROLEUM AND CRUDE IMPORTS FROM RUSSIA IN APRIL-JULY 2025, WHICH IS 28% OF INDIA'S TOTAL PETROLEUM IMPORTS IN THIS DURATION. IN THE SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR, INDIA HAD IMPORTED CRUDE WORTH $20.4 BILLION FROM RUSSIA

CORRECTION AHEAD?

FOREIGN PORTFOLIO INVESTORS (FPIs) have withdrawn nearly ₹1.43 lakh crore in the calendar year till September 8, as per NSDL data. This is the highest in the past five years, driven by high valuations, slowing nominal growth, and muted earnings in the recent quarter. Yet, markets have remained relatively resilient, with the Nifty500 down just 7% from its peak and Nifty50 down about 6%. Analysts say this is due to the FII selling being absorbed by retail buying. While experts expect a sideways correction in the coming quarters, they rule out a sharp near-term fall.

BIG BET

AMAZON HAS COMPLETED its acquisition of digital lender Axio (formerly Capital Float) after securing approval from the Reserve Bank of India, marking one of its biggest bets in the country. The move deepens Amazon's financial services play, building on its six-year partnership with Axio through Amazon Pay. The deal would leverage the e-commerce giant's scale and distribution to make financial services a growth engine while staying aligned with regulations. Axio, which has served over 10 million customers to date, will continue to operate under its current team while integrating as a subsidiary of Amazon.
