

P

1

PRIYA SINGH AND her husband Akaash, Delhi-based garments exporters, celebrated their 10th wedding anniversary in October. To mark the occasion, they bought the new Bvlgari Bvlgari Mangalsutra sautoir necklace and the B.zero 1 kada bracelet. The mangalsutra, in its second version after the wild success of the first, is priced at ₹13.60 lakh, while earlier this year, Bvlgari introduced the kada at about ₹12 lakh to target men. “India is one of the temples of jewellery as people worship gold and jewellery here,” says Bvlgari CEO Jean-Christophe Babin.

50 | Bvlgari is not the only global luxury brand to have India-specific products. It has almost become a norm for such brands to introduce a Diwali collection. For instance, Christian Louboutin has launched its limited-edition India-specific collection—The Diwali Edit—of shoes for men and women along with handbags.

Global luxury brands are increasingly focussing on personalisation to appeal to the Indian consumers, says Pushpa Bector, Senior Executive Director and Business Head-Retail at DLF, that operates two luxury malls—Emporio and Chanakya—in Delhi. “This includes introducing limited-edition pieces, leveraging local artisanship, and curating experiences that reflect India’s diverse heritage.”

Consulting firm Bain, in a recent report, said that India’s luxury market will be worth $85-90 billion by 2030. Market research firm Euromonitor International, in its ‘Luxury Goods in India’ report, says the retail sales of luxury goods in India increased by 3% in current value terms to reach ₹55,380 crore in 2023. “The outlook for the Indian luxury goods market remains positive with a robust RSP (retail selling price) growth of 6% CAGR (in real terms) anticipated in the next five years (2024-2029) led by the experiential luxury category and personal luxury goods,” says Fflur Roberts, Head of Global Luxury Goods at Euromonitor International.

India has 334 billionaires according to the Hurun India Rich List 2024; and The Capgemini Research Institute’s World Wealth Report 2024 says the number of high net-worth individuals (HNWIs) is at 3,589 million. As the number of rich increases, so do luxury sales. Luxury players have documented high sales in various categories—such as cars—that touched a record high of 42,731 units in CY2023, up 20% year-on-year, according to data and analytics firm Jato Dy-

1 OBJECT OF DESIRE

This Christian Louboutin Paloma Clutch in gold makes for a great accessory with both ethnic and westernwear

2 LUXE MEETS TRADITION

The Bvlgari Bvlgari Mangalsutra sautoir necklace has been designed exclusively for customers in India

3 BAG IT UP

These Bon Bon bags by Jimmy Choo feature crystal embroidery on a satin base and are made in Italy

4 FESTIVE CHEER

Pair these Christian Louboutin Lady Bombay Diwali shoes in fuchsia gold with your ethnic outfit for the festive vibe

5 BURNING RUBBER

Treat yourself to a Lamborghini Huracan EVO Spyder

