

THE BRIGHT SPOTS

• While retail spaces dedicated to luxury brands are growing across India, many more are needed if one considers the number of brands waiting to enter the country

In the meantime, Bharti Real Estate is gearing up to launch 'The Mall At Worldmark' in 2027. It will be a 3 million sq. ft property at Delhi's Aerocity, with certain sections dedicated to luxury brands.

WITH RISING INCOME and higher aspirations among the youth who are digitally exposed to luxury brands, I foresee plenty of action happening in this field. The influence of social media amongst the youth is tremendous and the same brings in aspirations in the minds of many young, earning members of the youth," says CBRE's Magazine.

And the future seems bright. The CBRE report mentions that "millennials and GenZ collectively hold a significant share in the market for luxury retail. Notably the spending power of GenZ and even the younger Gen Alpha is projected to grow nearly three times faster than the other generations until 2030. This trend highlights a more precocious attitude towards luxury with GenZ consumer becoming conscious of luxury products much earlier than millennials (at the age of 15 vs 18-20 earlier). Gen Alpha will exhibit similar behaviour in their approach to luxury consumption, the report anticipates.
