

with emeralds the size of pigeon eggs. Designed by Mumbai-based jewellers Kamyen, she wore a one-of-a-kind 141-carat Colombian emerald, set amongst 127 carats of fancy shaped diamonds.

Singer-entrepreneur Rihanna also has a special affinity for Indian jewellery and is often spotted in creations by Sabyasachi as well as Manish Malhotra, sometimes combining pieces from both, as she did at the launch of Fenty Hair in Los Angeles earlier in June. She wore a three-drop rubellite, tourmaline, and brilliant-cut diamond necklace from Sabyasachi and paired it with a ruby choker from Manish Malhotra made using 18k gold and custom-cut rubies encrusted in diamonds.

India's jewellery industry, currently estimated at $85.52 billion and expected to expand at a CAGR of 5.7% from 2024 to 2030, has been having a monumental year, especially with the Ambani (Anant Ambani and Radhika Merchant) wedding serving us some of the biggest baubles the world has ever seen. Anant Ambani's 720-carat emerald brooch designed by Mumbai-based Heeramaneck & Son Jewellers in collaboration with Cartier, was a throwback to the Maharajas of yore.

76 | Renowned maisons (think Cartier) in Europe have for long drawn inspiration from India's rich history of jewellery design and craftsmanship. However, an increasing number of independent designers are making waves globally today. From the sleek design studios of Mumbai to ateliers in Kolkata and bylanes of Delhi, these jewellers are expanding India's jewellery heritage with their bold and contemporary designs. And with more and more celebs wearing their creations on red carpets across the world, Indian jewellery designers are basking in the global limelight.

"There is constant inquiry from the most important retailers to bring the Sabyasachi High Jewellery collections to their customers. Saks Fifth Avenue has invited us to exhibit in their Beverly Hills store during the Oscars, and Bergdorf Goodman consistently showcases our new collections and houses a permanent assortment. The overwhelming response during these events proves there is a robust market globally for exceptional products at outstanding value," says couturier Sabyasachi Mukherjee, who launched his high jewellery collection in 2023 and currently retails it from his ateliers in Delhi, Mumbai, Kolkata, and Hyderabad, and also in New York. "Expanding a jewellery business can be tricky due to
