THE MOOD IS visibly joyful. It is Teacher's Day, and there is buzz of a big-ticket investment to enhance the picturesque campus. Students in formal attire go about their business on campus with a spring in their step.

The National Institute for Training in Industrial Engineering (NITIE) is a name familiar to a lot of people, even more so for those who live in Mumbai. But there was a massive change here last year. In August 2023, the move to rename the institute to IIM Mumbai got the assent of the President of India.

With that one stroke of the pen, it became the 21st Indian Institute of Management, joining the elite list. More importantly, it was the first that did not begin its journey as an IIM. That in itself makes this one unique. Soon, it was ranked sixth among business schools by the government's National Institutional Ranking Framework (NIRF). That has set the institute up for the next stage of its journey.
