

the campus of a law college in the state capital, Panaji, when one of its patrons managed to get the classrooms free after 12:30 pm.

By the mid-1990s, it was hard to ignore the need for a larger campus. The state government stepped in, letting GIM shift its campus to a heritage building that earlier housed the Goa Medical College. After spending a few years in the stunning 300-year-old building overlooking the Mandovi River, the management finally decided to get its own campus in 2006-07. Not run like a typical business venture, finding funds remained a challenge. But the goodwill of the institute helped the management raise ₹12 crore from its patrons. And the rank and profile of its board of governors came in handy as many of them provided guarantees for the ₹35-odd crore bank loans for the modern campus.

Since then, it has invested more than ₹250 crore—taking its total investments to ₹300 crore—in expanding and modernising its facilities and labs and building amenities promoting extracurricular activities. It now boasts a cricket ground, basketball court, football ground, gymnasium, lawn tennis court, and a swimming pool, among others, apart from faculty quarters and student hostels. “We are not located in a city, and we don’t want our campus to look like one. Architecturally, we haven’t changed the lay of the land [which is hilly],” says Professor Ajit Parulekar, GIM’s Director.

But it’s not just the view from the campus that stands apart. GIM has carved out a niche for itself because of its academic excellence, superior facilities, and its track record that dwarfs that of many of its peers in the top metros.

After all, it is no mean feat that after steadily improving its rank over the last two years, GIM now stands in the 24th position in the latest edition of the BT-MDRA India’s Best B-schools survey.

One key factor that has boosted GIM’s fortunes over the years is how it operates. Father D’Souza inculcated a culture of excellence from the very beginning. In spite of its small size, the first few faculty members came with doctorates from IIM A, B, and C.

Unlike many private B-schools in the country, GIM is run by a Board of Governors, who hail from the upper echelons of Goa’s education, bureaucracy, and business. “We run like a society, which at any point in time has 17-24 members. None of them are investors; thus, no money goes out. It’s purely not-for-profit.
