

THE RECIPE FOR LEADERSHIP

Darpan Sanghvi, Group Founder & CEO of The Good Glamm Group, has found solace and creativity in a corner of the house quite opposite to the boardroom table—the kitchen

BY ARNAV DAS SHARMA

110 |

IN THE WHIRLWIND world of business, where boardrooms and deadlines reign supreme, discovering solace in a creative outlet transcends luxury—it becomes a necessity. For 44-year-old Darpan Sanghvi, Group Founder & CEO of The Good Glamm Group, that outlet is cooking. What started as a pastime during the pandemic has evolved into a passion, offering him relaxation and a way to connect with his family. For Sanghvi, cooking is much more than just preparing a meal; it's a reflection of his leadership style, his outlook on life, and his approach to balancing the demands of entrepreneurship. But more than anything else, it is therapeutic.

COOKING AS THERAPY

Sanghvi's love affair with cooking began during the Covid-19 lockdown, a time when many found themselves exploring new

“Over time, I began experimenting with ingredients and expressing my creativity through cooking,” he says, adding, what is great about cooking is that while it helps one disconnect, it also gives a sense of accomplishment. “That, honestly, is the perfect recipe for an entrepreneur—a sense of being productive while also disconnecting.”

Sanghvi explains a blend of

“I normally cook every Sunday and try to do something different every weekend”

hobbies. “During Covid, I started cooking and quickly fell in love with it. Seeing my family smile and enjoy the meals I made brought me so much joy,” he reflects. This joy, however, was not about just the food; it was about the process—the experimentation, and the sense of accomplishment.

relaxation and productivity is crucial for someone who is constantly steering a company.

Despite his busy schedule, Sanghvi makes it a point to cook every Sunday. It's the time when he can step away from the corporate grind and dive into a world of flavours and aromas. “I normally

