

POWERED BY TCS

THE RISE OF TCS

- In FY05, when TCS was listed, it accounted for just 14% of the total income among listed group companies
- That year its share of profit after tax (PAT) among the Top 10 listed group companies was 24%

WHEN RNT RETIRED

- Tata Motors led the pack in FY13, when Ratan Tata retired from Tata Sons, with TCS coming a distant third
- However, TCS accounted for more than half the share of profits among the Top 10 group firms

CHALLENGES APLENTY

Acquisitions apart, some other decisions too did not pan out the way RNT wanted them to. Take the case of Tata Motors' foray into passenger cars with the launch of the Tata Indica. The initial consumer feedback was negative and pushed the company into the red by ₹500 crore in FY01.

Ambi Parameswaran, who headed the account at ad agency FCB Ulka at the time, gives credit to RNT for getting to the root of the problem and giving his teams a free hand to fix it. When the Tata Indica V2 was launched in 2001, it became one of the best-selling cars. "It was just his courage of conviction playing out."

However, such conviction could not salvage the disappointing performance of the Tata Nano, which was priced at just ₹1 lakh. "It was well-intentioned but a commercially unsuccessful project. The car was designed as an affordable vehicle for the masses, but its branding as a 'cheap' car did not resonate with consumers," says Ray.

For many years, the belief that the group would struggle with B2C business had gained ground, and the foray into telecommunications through Tata Teleservices confirmed that. A joint venture with Japan's NTT Do-
