

C. Vijayakumar (right), CEO & MD, HCLTech in conversation with Siddharth Zarabi (left), Group Editor, Business Today to acquire Greenland. The clarification did help, but the world continues to watch warily as he unmakes eight decades of American foreign policy.

| 129

From the Indian perspective, what he said outside the Kongress hall was even more important. Trump said he had great respect for Prime Minister Narendra Modi, and added, “He is a fantastic man and a friend. We are going to have a good deal.” That too was a signal. But it is Brussels that has gotten across the finish line first and stolen a march over Washington. Will that move the needle on the India-US trade deal? Only Trump can tell.

However, even if all of this had not panned out, India continued to stand out on the promenade in the ski village with its big presence. India’s delegation matched its size and the aspirations of around 10 states that showed up with pavilions and investment pipelines. Union ministers were in the mix too—Ashwini Vaishnaw, Pralhad Joshi, and K. Rammo-han Naidu—who held dozens of meetings every day to hard sell the resilient India story.

T. V. Narendran, CEO & MD, Tata Steel

For some years now, India is not discussed just as a “promise”, it is seen as a large market and supply-chain cog that delivers value. CEOs