

Established by the Adani Foundation, MUBSS runs diversified livelihood ventures to train and support women so that they become economically self-sufficient. By mobilizing the women, organizing them into a cooperative society and enhancing their risk-taking capacity, the goal is to improve the social and economic status of the women as well as their families, paving the way for better education, better health, and social harmony.

As part of MUBSS, Anaso got the opportunity to manage the dairy unit at her village. Initially hesitant, she trusted her instincts and accepted the challenge. With her newfound confidence and enhanced income, her position in the household was also elevated, inspiring other women in the community to take a step forward in their own journey of achieving self-reliance.

Like Anaso, the 250 members of MUBSS are engaged in spice grinding, sanitary pad production, vermicomposting, cooking mid-day meals for students of Adani Vidya Mandir (Surguja), phenyl production etc. Each member is earning a monthly income in the range of Rs 3,000 to 12,000, depending on their skills and ability to devote time.

Recently, in a significant step forward in promoting women empowerment and supporting local farmers, MUBSS inaugurated a mini store in the heart of Gumga village. The store sells fresh and organic vegetables to the residents, while also offering a variety of products made by the women such as spices, sanitary pads, handwash, phenyl, and dairy products. Through MUBSS, the Adani Foundation has helped in diversifying sources of income for these women and their families, who were otherwise primarily dependent on agriculture, forest produce, and daily wages.

As an additional benefit, there has been a shift towards healthy and hygienic behaviour in the community which can be substantiated by the increase in the use of toilets through interactions and awareness campaigns of the women selling phenyl. Also, with the production of sanitary pads by the women's cooperative, more women in the community have started using sanitary pads and this has reduced the incidences of disease. MUBSS has also indirectly helped to address an issue that was adversely impacting the lives of people in the region i.e., the dependence on alcohol. The region is marked by an abundance of Mahua trees which are commonly used to make alcohol. Now, MUBSS facilitates the production of Mahua laddoos.

Another core area where the Foundation is bringing about a notable change in the lives of the people of Salhi and Parsa villages is quality healthcare. In a bid to make preventive and curative healthcare services affordable and accessible, the Adani Foundation set up Swasthya Suvidha Kendras (SSKs) in these villages. These centres provide primary healthcare services to villagers – addressing both allopathic and alternative medicine needs. All healthcare services at these SSKs are provided at zero cost. This eliminates the financial burden and encourages them to go for timely medical check-ups.

In addition to the Swasthya Suvidha Kendras, the Foundation organizes regular rural medical camps to extend healthcare services to those residing in the remotest areas. These camps bring medical professionals and resources directly to the doorstep of villagers. This initiative further reduces barriers to healthcare access and ensures that no one is left behind in receiving essential medical care. The Foundation also conducts regular awareness camps in the villages to educate people on preventive healthcare, disease management and healthy practices.

The holistic interventions of the Adani Foundation in Surguja reflect its commitment towards making strategic social investments to achieve sustainable outcomes. Since 1996, it has been working in the core areas of education, healthcare, sustainable livelihoods, and community development. Its strategies are rooted in national priorities and global Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). At present, the Foundation operates in 5,753 villages across 19 states of India, positively impacting the lives of 7.3 million people.
