

DBS Bank India: A Different Kind of Bank

Kishore Poduri - Country Head, Human Resource

Here is a bank that has mastered the art of providing the best employee experience. Treating its employees like family, prioritising their well-being, building trust and actively listening to their needs are its mantras for success. Being recognised once again as a Kincentric Best Employer underscores DBS Bank India's commitment to its employees.

"We are always striving to be a different kind of bank in every sense - for our customers and for our employees.

Our goal is to make banking joyful by taking the toil out of the banking experience. Our workforce plays a critical role in bringing this brand promise to life. We constantly aim to improve our employee experience by finding ways to equip them with the skills as well as the tools to excel and adapt, thereby enabling them to deliver superior experience for our customers while aiming for better business outcomes," said Surojit Shome, Managing Director and CEO, DBS Bank India.

"We are humbled to be recognised as a Best Employer 2023 in India by Kincentric, marking our fourth consecutive win. This is a testament to our culture where employees are encouraged to 'Be the Best', 'Be the Change', 'Be the Difference'. Our endeavour is to create a supportive environment where our employees feel valued, connected, and empowered to thrive in both their personal and professional lives. The win also reflects their efforts towards making DBS the Best Bank for a Better World," said Kishore Poduri, Managing Director, and Country Head- Human Resources, DBS Bank India.

Employee experience is a key focus area for DBS Bank India. To achieve this, the bank consistently leverages technology to streamline its HR processes. Guided by a data-driven operating model, the bank's Employee Experience Council enhances engagement by adopting an innovative and tailored approach.

It also proactively seeks feedback from its staff, using these insights to continually enhance the employee experience. Particularly following the COVID-19 pandemic, the bank has strengthened its efforts around employee well-being, which has, in turn, resulted in improved productivity.

DBS Bank India has further bolstered its efforts by leveraging technology and enhancing its L&D initiatives. Kishore Poduri elaborates, "We prioritise career advancement for our employees by offering opportunities to upskill in the latest technologies. This also prepares them for expanded responsibilities across roles within the organisation. For example, we have institutionalised a Seed program, which entails a rigorous 24-month training focused on the latest technology that is at the core of our operations."

With its presence in over 350 cities across India, training the team to adhere to uncompromising servicing standards is no mean feat. However, with its consistent focus on training, upskilling, and continually refining its training programs, DBS Bank India has distinguished itself as a bank that stands out, benefiting both its customers and its employees alike.

DHL Express: Delivering Excellence Unabated

For this global leader in logistics, growth is a continuous process and so is employee capability building. The group today employs about 40,000 people in the country and this huge workforce is one of the biggest strengths to this well-nurtured organization. DHL services over 56,000 locations in India, has about 60 operating facilities as DHL Express and now a network of service points with a footprint of nearly 800 retail counters.

"There's no stagnancy. There has been no part of the year when we have not done some expansion work. So, our growth has been a continuous process. Even during the pandemic, we either expanded or relocated some of our facilities," says R.S Subramanian, Senior Vice President-DHL Express, India.

DHL is delivering excellence and not just shipments. There is a huge focus on the quality of work in every aspect of delivery. Its corporate purpose includes connecting people and improving lives. "We deliver joy, we deliver prospects, we deliver a solution, we solve a problem for our customers. That's the mindset with which we approach our business, and every employee is conscious of the vital role they play in this process," says Subramanian.

Employees are considered the first stakeholder at DHL. The organization believes that excellence is only possible due to its motivated team. Over the years, it has proven its immense focus on people by being the Kincentric Best Employer five times in a row. They put a significant focus on building a humane organization. "Respect is powerful, and it has a direct bearing over results. We are proud to have a team that is motivated with what they do. Their everyday work entails respect for what they do and their people which directly impacts their performance. Excellence is a residue of a highly motivated team," says Sunjoy Dhaawan, Chief HR officer – DHL express India.

Being in the service industry, DHL recognises that it is its people who deliver the promise that they make to their customers. "We can build fantastic facilities, bring great technology into play and build a network for connecting with our customers, but finally all of them are operated by people and awareness of this truth is what keeps us going strength to strength", adds Dhaawan.
