

POWER AND PROGRESS: WOMEN IN LEADERSHIP

Rahul Kanwal (From left), News Director, India Today and Aaj Tak, and Executive Director, Business Today, with Piyush Goyal, Union Minister of Commerce and Industry

-  Drawing parallels with the US and speaking about the recently-concluded elections there and women in top leadership roles, Goyal said India has a legacy of respecting women, whether in politics, business, or public service
-  “Empowering women at the grassroots will yield strong leaders for the future,” Goyal said
-  Speaking about initiatives like direct cash transfers to women, the Union Minister said, “This support is a gesture of respect, helping women meet their needs... We’re seeing its positive impact, and, importantly, it does not replace efforts to create jobs or opportunities. Rather, it complements the wider economic inclusion we aim for”
