

■ Ms. Pallavi Shroff
Managing Partner at Shardul Amarchand Mangaldas & Co.

With new and emerging industry sectors, social shifts, and a host of other factors, what is the scenario on law management and your law firm's impact on creating a highly professional pool of legal experts cut out for the new trends in business and rapidly evolving social norms?

In today's dynamic business and societal landscape, a legal approach must be both adaptive and forward-looking. With emerging new practices like fintech, green energy, private credit, and technology, we at Shardul Amarchand Mangaldas & Co., try and embrace these changes by equipping our professionals with the tools and knowledge to navigate such industry challenges. Through structured training programs, knowledge-sharing forums, and mentorship initiatives, we ensure our lawyers are not only proficient in traditional legal practices but also skilled at managing complex, evolving issues. We encourage our lawyers to develop a wider perspective on the issues that they are advising on to ensure that our solutions holistically address business, internal, external and other contextual needs.

Recognising the need to reflect societal shifts within the legal ecosystem, we prioritise 'people-first' policies that foster inclusivity and flexibility. Our workplace supports this vision with flexible work arrangements, four office working days per week, caregiver leave, and a robust anti-harassment framework, creating an environment that empowers our lawyers to serve diverse clients effectively. By combining technical expertise with a deep understanding of social and business trends, we are developing a new generation of legal professionals prepared to lead a transformative world.

Recently, we enhanced our compensation and benefits program, redefined our employer value proposition, and introduced initiatives such as sabbatical options, mental health support, and performance-linked rewards. This reflects our commitment to nurturing talent in a rapidly changing world. Our rich legacy, combined with our progressive vision, ensures we remain a trusted advisor to businesses and individuals alike.

Your law firm is a witness to and experienced the changes across diverse legal specialties spanning over 100 years. How have you stayed the course of success while carrying forward a rich legacy? Any particular milestone that you would like to share with the readers?

Shardul Amarchand Mangaldas & Co.'s success over the past century stems from its ability to evolve while staying true to its foundational values of excellence, integrity, and service. By blending traditional legal wisdom with modern innovation, the firm has remained relevant across generations. A key factor in this longevity is our focus on nurturing talent, fostering a collaborative environment, and prioritising client-centric solutions. One of the key cultural pillars of our leadership is that we are not afraid to adapt and transform to keep evolving with and ahead of the pace of the changes in the world.

A significant milestone in our journey was the rebranding of the firm in 2015, followed by an expansion from two offices